1. Soviet telephone lines (allegedly the Moscow-Berlin line) are being extended beyond Okunin (Langmeil-P54/S14) in the direction of Babimost (Bomst-053/W52).
2. The line runs partly along the Sulechow (Zuellichau-054/W41)-Babimost road, and partly cross-country. On the short sectors where this Soviet line runs parallel with the civilian telephone line, they lie approximately five meters apart.
3. In those places where the Soviet line crosses the civilian telephone line, the Soviet cables are fixed on shorter posts (approximately 7 m.) and run underneath the civilian line. In these places they are protected by a net of the same type as is used for crossings of telephone lines with high tension lines. This net is approximately ten meters long and one-half meter wide.
4. The Soviet line has two wires thicker than normal telephone wires.
